Many TV series say bye, bye to the viewer when low ratings make them disappear from the tube forever, but Mission Impossible and Taxi are 2 exceptions. Having run its successful course on Network TV, Mission Impossible is now in syndication, day and night all around the world. I'm Joey Reynolds(JR) on Satellite Live and my first guest tonight is the former co-star of Mission Impossible and more recently, Space:1999, the lovely Barbara Bain.(BB) (Joey opens lines for calls)

George from Wooster, Ma--Mission Impossible just started running here in Boston and I'd like to know what happened to Steven Hill?

BB--Steven Hill created the character of Dan Briggs in the 1st season. Are you asking what he's doing currently?

G--Why did he leave the series and what's he doing now?

BB--I do not know where Steve is at the moment. I've not seen him in quite a long time. In terms of why he left the series, it was an agreement on all parts. The first year had its own shape. Steve filled that shape and at the end the producers and Steve came to a parting of the ways. That's my way of not telling you too much because I don't want to talk about somebody elses problems.

JR--Barbara, it's very nice to meet you.

BB--Thank you very much. I once did a play as a matter of fact that was based-played in Wooster, Ma. S.M. Barryman had grown up there and wrote a play that took place in his home town.

JR--You're one of my favorite actors.Can I call you an actor, that's a generic..no, genderless term right?

BB--Generic term will do.(laughs)

JR--OK, generic. What are you doing right now?

BB--Besides sitting here talking with you? All right! Doing all kinds of things right now. Doing actually a bit of writing and embarking on some production as well with my husband, Martin Landau. We have a property that he has written & will direct that we are going to co-produce as a film. We also have a piece of material that I have adapted from a novel that I'm going to take to the theatre. So we're busy doing those kind of things

Rusty from Michigan--Could you tell me if you're going to be on any more television shows?

BB--At the moment I don't have anything in production. What's happening at the moment is that both Space:1999 and Mission are re-running all over the place. In terms of plans for a future series, if I can find something worthwhile to put together, yes, I will do television again. I love television.

Mark--Has Barbara done any stage or screen acting with her husband since Mission?

BB--We did Space:1999 which was a series set in the future and was shot in England. We did 50 episodes which are running in various places at the moment here and in 130 other countries. Martin and I often work together. We often work apart.

JR--I thought you were going to bring him with you tonight. Would have been a nice surprise. You two work well together.

BB-- Thank you.

JR--Rumor has it they're going to do a Mission Impossible again or a movie. Are the two of you going to do it?

BB--It depends on what they have as a script. Mission was a particularly well done piece of material. If they're going to do it well again, we may very well be interested. It is hard to re-do something. I don't know who is going to be involved in writing it.

JR--You and Martin left after the first 3 years.

BB-- Yes, we did the first 3 years. The show did indeed go on after that but there was a great change over at the studio in terms of who owned it and when the new people came in there were a lot of changes made, Martin left and I got kind of caught in a squeeze between the studio and all sorts of things. We went through litigation for a year about it all but I never did return to the show.

JR--Your both known internationally as being very fine actors. Have you ever done British Theatre?

BB--Thank you. No.

JR--Did you own the Space:1999 show?

BB--We had a large participation.

JR--Boy, that was early Star Wars, it was so ahead of its time.

BB--Yes. It was a very exciting project that we went over to. You know we went over to England to do that. It meant a big change of life. Taking our children, going and setting up a tent, or a Gerogian townhouse, take your pick, and shooting there. We were there actually for 4 years so it was a very special kind of time. But it was because of the nature of the product that it attracted us. There were possibilities in it that had not as yet been investigated. And there was Lord Lew Grade, he was Sir Lew in the old days, who had the facility and the financial backing to do all the special effects on a large scale which hadn't been done on television. He was able to do that so it was very attractive to us.

JR--Well, its no secret that George Lucas spent much of his time and got all his ideas for Star Wars from Britishers.

John from Detroit--I would just like to say that though Star Trek came along first Space:1999 was a very good show.

BB--Thank you. We had an interesting premise with Space that was different than Star Trek in that the Enterprise went out on its voyage on purpose. They went out to seek what was going on out there. The premise of our show was that we were a group of people who were doing scientific work on the moon and by mistake, were hurtled out of Earth's orbit and therefore at the mercy of anything we encountered. It was a different kind of approach. We were not armed and were not meant to be traveling Space with no control over where we were going. We were very vulnerable and that was an interesting way to approach it.

Mark from Niagra Falls--Why did it take so long from Mission Impossible to Space:1999?

BB--Primarily because of the kind of material offered. There was a series of events that took place in that everbody thought Martin and I should do another spy show, and we thought that we had done one and done it well and it was rather pointless to do another one. There was a lot of that kind of thing being offered us and we did not want to repeat something. When the Space project was offered to us, it seemed very exciting and had a lot of potential and that is why we committed to TV again. Television is very hard to do. You work day in and day out, very very long hours and you really have to like what you're doing or its too painful. It's great fun if you feel like you're creating something and have something you can grow with. That's why we were attracted to Space:1999.

JR--What time did you get up?

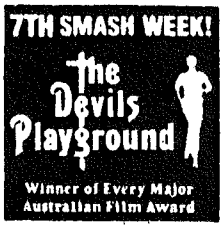

BB--Oh...four.

JR--We'll come right back with Barbara Bain from Mission Impossible and Space:1999.

Koala Country

Or "Whats new from down under"

The ad and review are from the movie The Devil's Playground which starred Nick Tate and for which he won an Australian Film Award.

The following is a review of Nick's Australian TV series HOLIDAY ISLAND.

(Variety review date in italics) "The Devil's Playground" (IFEX/EMC) opened Fri. (Oct. 30) to one favorable review (Denby, New York/Cue), two unfavorable (Canby, Times; Carroll, News) and one inconclusive (Winsten, Post). (Reviewed in March 10, '76 issue).

Holiday Island, starring Nick Tate, is a prime time soapie-drama centering around the staff and guests at a luxurious holiday village. The major plot of the series centers around the resorts manager, Neil Scott, played by Nick Tate. Neil and his sister-in-law, Angela, have their idyllic life shattered when Angela's wayward husband turns up on the island. British actor Steven Grives who plays her husband Jason Scott, was imported especially for the series. He has been labeled Australian television's J.R. Ewing because of his attempts to undermine and take over Neil's position as manager. Special sets were built for the series at Channel 10 Melbourne studios to simulate a real island resort. The sets cost $300,000 to build. Some scenes are filmed on an island off Brisbane in the Whitsunday Passage. Unfortunately, the series has received average ratings and the TV critics and public have criticized it because of the lousy scripts and overuse of romance/sex on television. Despite the scripts, all the actors were praised for their performances. (Thanks to Geoff Tilley, Victoria, Australia for the review)
(Eds Note: A more extensive coverage of Holiday Island can be found in The British Nick Tate Club newsletter #19)

The Invisible Intruder

by Alan Andrews

"Moonbase Alpha Status Report...three thousand four hundred and eighty two days after leaving Earth orbit. Doctor Helena Russell recording. We have passed through an asteroid field which might have caused irreparable damage to the nuclear waste dumps. Captain Alan Carter and Eagle pilot Bill Frazer made a systems check and found no damage to report, but Captain Carter encountered something that cannot be explained."

"Thanks Bill, let us know if you remember anything else."
"Will do Commander. Take good care of Alan Doctor Russell."
"John look at him. He's not harmed in any way. No loss of any mental faculties or appetite and no apparent organ disfunction.
"Then you're going to release him Helena?"
"There's no reason not to. I'll go tell him he's to report for duty as soon as he's ready."

"I don't believe it. You were hit by an electrical charge and thrown 20 feet in the air and you're only knocked unconcious."
"I can't figure it either Ben. I was on my way back to the ship when one of the asteroids started to glow. I went to look about it and it blew up. I felt a jolt and the next thing I know, Bill is carrying me into the Eagle."

"As long as it doesn't keep you from our game tonight. I've got a bet on this one."
"Why Nurse Duncan, is that all you care about."
"You know I'm just kidding Alan." Vanessa grabs his arm and then kisses him.
"Well," Ben interupts as Helena walks in, "I'll get back to the tests I was running."
"Thanks for all you've done Ben. OK Helena, what's the verdict?"
"You're as healthy as a horse Alan, now go back to work."
"Great! Oh by the way, we've got a tennis court reserved for this evening and...."
"And the answer is yes. Just don't overdue it and you should be fine tonight."

As Alan leaves Medical Center, Vanessa has more to add. "Now listen to your doctor, she knows whats best."
"You make it sound like I wasn't going to Van."
"Its just that I know your type Alan. You'll still work as hard as ever."
"Don't you worry your pretty blonde head. I won't take a chance on missing out on the greatest tennis match of the century. Alan Carter and Vanessa Duncan are finally going to beat Tony Verdeschi and Maya even if I have to crawl to get there."

Alan meets Maya on his way to Hangar Two. He puts his arm around her and gives her a kiss on the cheek.
"Either you're glad to see me or glad to get out of Medical. Which is it Alan?" she asks.
"Lets say a little of both Maya."
"Well, this saves me the trouble of taking the morning report to the hangar."
"Thank you." he says as he leafs through the report. "I'll be in Command Center later Maya. I'm supposed to take it easy today."
"Good, you've got some paperwork to take care of. If it gets to be too much for you, I'll give you a hand."
"Thanks Maya. Oh by the way, there's nothing in the report about those two planets we're approaching. Strange, it should be here."
"What did you say, Alan?" asked Maya.
He shakes his head, "I said I'll be spending most of the day in Command Center. Maybe you should have those pretty Psychon ears checked." he laughs and continues on his way.

That evening in the Recreation Center, Vanessa and Alan triumph over Tony and Maya for the Alpha Championship.

"I don't believe it." said Tony wiping the perspiration from his forehead, "Where is that kangaroo from Australia? I want to give him the what for."
"He's showering right now Tony." Vanessa replied.
"He played like he never has before, don't you think so Maya?"
"Like he was being helped Tony. It was quite odd."
"Well he didn't get that help from me." said Vanessa, "He played by himself most of the time. He just didn't need me."
Commander Koenig stops in to congratulate the winners.
"Thank you Commander," Vanessa said with a snicker directed to Tony. "I'll tell Alan you stopped by."
"Maya, scanners are picking up two planets in our fourth quadrant. We should be in visual range by early afternoon. We'll start preparing for it in the morning. Again, congratulations Vanessa."
"Thats it John, rub it in." said a frustrated Tony.
"Two planets, how did he know?" mumbled Maya.
"What did you say Maya? asked Tony.
"Nothing Tony, nothing at all.

The Fifth Annual

International Space Convention Information

19 82

Springfield Massachusetts

GENERAL UPDATE #2

The Fifth Annual International Space Convention-July 30-August 1, 1982-Springfield Massachusetts

LOCATION: The Springfield Marriott Hotel will be housing the fifth annual convention. Conveniently located directly off of Interstate 91 and with free shuttle service to and from Bradley International Airport, the Marriott has gone through a complete renovation within the last six months. The hotel is attached to the Baystate West shopping mall, a futuristic bi-level complex with nearly one hundred stores. For information, phone (413) 781-7111, or call toll-free (800) 228-9290.

ACCOMMODATIONS: Room rates per night are $40.00 for a single, $46.00 for a double, $52.00 for a triple, $58.00 for a quad, and $185.00 for a suite. Reservation cards will be sent out with ticket confirmations and these special rates only apply if you book through the Convention Committee. Rooms must be booked at least 2 weeks in advance.

ADMISSION: Ticket prices do not differ too much from that of past years. The rates are $15.00 until May 31, $18.00 thereafter. For children under 14, $8.00 until May 31, $10.00 thereafter. At-the-door one day admissions are $6.00 for adults, $4.00 for children. Non-attending and supporting memberships are $10.00. Remember that roughly one hundred admissions equal one celebrity guest. Tickets are now on sale.

GUESTS: Celebrity guests will be announced as they make final acceptances. After only two months of preparation, our first guest has accepted. He is MARTIN BOWER, model maker and special effects technician for Space: 1999, ALIEN, OUTLAND and many other science fiction films. We are also very pleased to report that BARRY MORSE has accepted our invitation to attend Con '82. As everyone knows, Barry played Professor Bergman in the first season of Space:1999. Tentative acceptances have been made by other celebrities.

CONVENTION ACTIVITIES: In addition to the celebrity guests, convention activities will include autograph sessions, a 24-hour film program, the annual costume party and competition, a wargaming room, an amateur film contest, a fan art show/competition and auction, an expanded dealers room, fan club meetings, the latest in video games, and a charity auction. Plus a couple of special events.....

CELEBRITY BANQUET: This year, the banquet will be held on Friday night, so as not to conflict with the costume competition. The price has been lowered to $25.00 per person. After a dinner with the stars, the banquet attendants, limited to one hundred, will then move on to our very special attraction.

SPACE CITY U.S.A.: For the first and only time in the United States comes this very special attraction. Space City USA is an exhibit compiled from the now-defunct Blackpool Gerry Anderson museum. In addition to original material from all of the Anderson series, Space City USA will include many original props, models, set pieces, and costumes from Space:1999. Most of the pieces in this collection are on loan from British studios and private individuals. This is a once-in-a-lifetime exhibit that is not to be missed. More details later.

CONVENTION INQUIRIES AND STAFF: When writing for information on the Fifth Annual Space Convention, please always include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. The convention is being run by a six-member Executive Board, whose members are as follows: Chris Landry--Executive Director//Ed Miarecki--Assistant Director//David Hirsch--International Coordinator//Christine Hantzopulos--Regional Coordinator//Shimane Oderkirk--Executive Secretary// John and Kathy Von Kamp--Alliance Presidents. The names and addresses of the individual Department Chiefs will be announced in the next general update. For now all inquiries should be addressed to:
The Fifth Annual Space Convention / 12 Maplewood Terrace / Springfield, Ma 01108

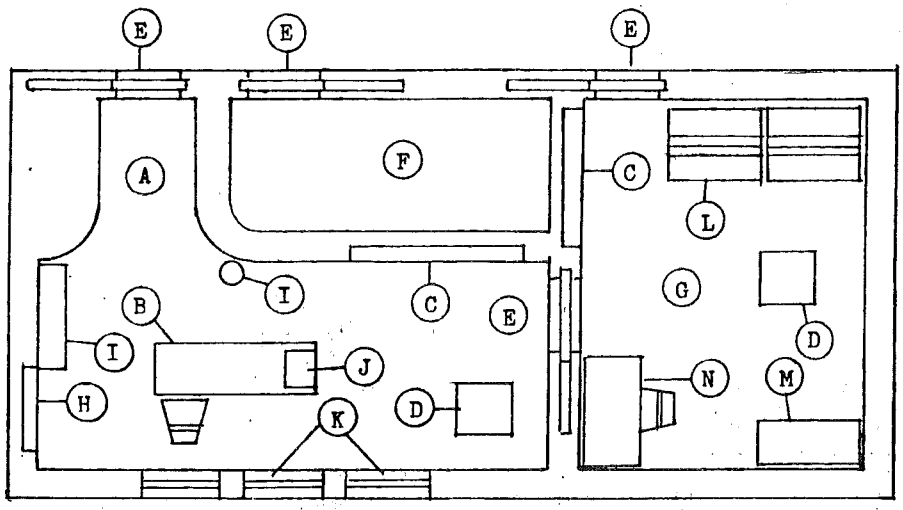

NOTE: The Main Computer newsletter will be the official source for information concerning the convention. Any information found in an official convention General Update may be reprinted in any other publication. Future Update will be found in all coming issues of Main Computer.

PERMISSION IS GRANTED TO REPRINT ANY OF THE ABOVE INFORMATION.

DATELINE : ALPHA

Happy birthday to John Koenig. (March 17, 1982) It was a memorable birthday (25) His date Jean presented him with a rocket ship tie pin.

SPECIAL NOTICE: For an undetermined length of time selected moonbase personnel will be required to work double shifts. It seems that while cleaning out several storage compartments, the crew stumbled on an old package marked "Hysterical" (Historical?) games. When opened, the package was found to contain a quantity of something called "Rubiks Cubes". It looked simple and it was decided to hold a tournament. We are pleased to report that all contestants are recovering nicely in the psychiatric ward under Dr. Russell's care.....We have to break for an urgent message from the Commander.....To all Moonbase personnel...All devices known as "Rubiks Cubes"are to be brought to a central point for disposal. DO NOT! I repeat DO NOT! attempt to play the game as it is habit forming and has been determined to be hazardous to your health. All cubes are to be brought to my office for disposal. That is all....."mmmm, if I turn the top this way and the side that way....." ....Well folks, that's it for this issue of Dateline Alpha. If you have any news to report send it to : The International Space: 1999 Alliance // 86 First Street // New London, Ohio 44851 It will be sent to us by neutrino transmission.

SPACE: 1999 A TRILOGY

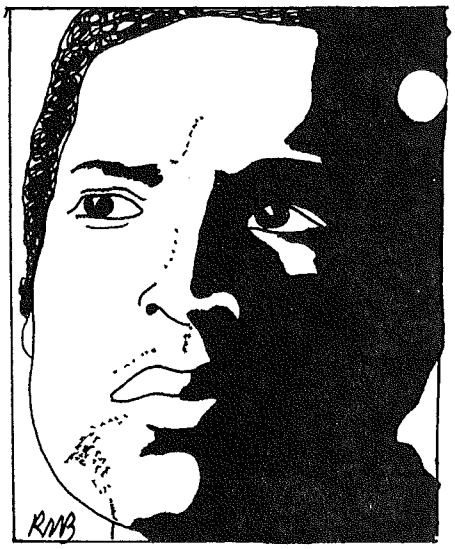

A few hours later, Alan opened his eyes and gazed around the room. He spotted Bob across the room and called, "What are the chances of getting something to eat around here?"

Bob walked over to him laughing, "Well, I don't know...have to check with the chief." He raised his comlock, "Helena..."

Helena's face appeared on the tiny screen. "Yes, Bob?"

"Alan's awake...and demanding food!"

She nodded saying, "That sounds like Alan....be right there!"

Moments later, Alan saw Helena enter followed by John, Maya, David, and Tony. "Well now, it's about time!" cried Tony.

Maya smiled at him and asked, "How are you feeling?"

"Great....best doctors in town, couldn't go wrong!"

"Bob says you're hungry...would you like food for the body or food for the soul?" Helena smiled at him while taking his pulse.

Alan puzzled that one in his head before replying, "Food for the soul? Well, let me see..." He stopped, seeing some shared secret in all their faces, "Heh, you don't mean....."

"That's right! While you were taking your little beauty nap...we went into orbit around Lemo!" David proudly announced.

"Commander?" Alan asked hopefully. "Yes, Alan....it's true!"

"Oh Wow...and I missed it? Well, we've got work to do...." He started to get up.

Helena gently pushed him back, "No you don't! Believe it or not we can manage quite well..so just relax."

"Oh, I almost forgot, " cried Tony, "...I saved this for you!"

He held out a glass to Alan who didn't have to be told what it was. "Tony, have a little respect for a sick man, will you?" Alan groaned.

Maya just shook her head and pushed Tony toward the door, "For that..you should be court martialed!"

"Back to work, everyone!" cried John.

We have to know. Was the trivia quiz that hard?!!! We only got one response! He got 4 of 6 correct. If it was really that hard let us know and we will try to find something a little easier. This month we are back to the Dialogue Quiz. Who said and in what episode was the phrase"Bang! Bang! You're dead." used. Good Luck.
